

Coast Range Newt

Taricha torosa torosa

The newts on this preserve are terrestrial as adults, returning to water to breed. They are often seen at this creek crossing.

All newts are a type of salamander. Newts have rougher skin than other salamanders. They are predators, prowling for food at night, eating insects, earthworms and spiders.

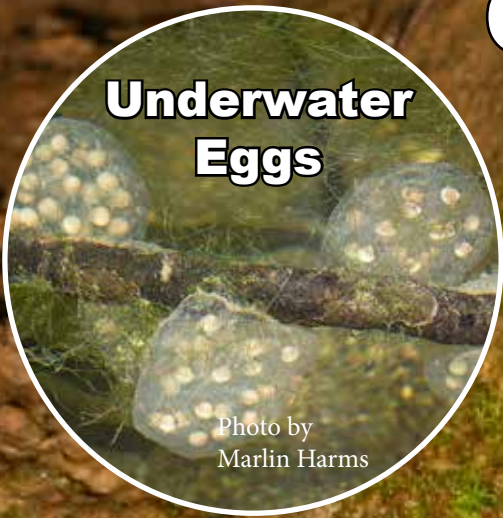

Photo by
Marlin Harms

Photo by Gry Nafis

